

STARFISH

Early one morning, on a long beach, an adult decided to go for a walk and came across a young child tossing something into the sea.

“What are you doing?” he asked.

“Pretty soon” she explained “the sun is going to come out and dry up all these starfish, so I am throwing them back before they die”

“But there are thousands” the man pointed out. “What difference do you think you can really make?”

The young child considered this question for a moment and surveyed the long expanse of the beach, which was indeed filled with starfish washed up on the shore.

She bent down and picked up a starfish, resuming her efforts.

“Well” she said finally answering, “I’ll make a difference to this one.” And with that she tossed the starfish into the sea.

You can make a difference to one.