About the speaker

Dr. Huey has been working with troubled youth since 1994. He started his career in the helping professions as a therapist in community mental health. He then spent time in a private practice where he did custody evaluations and provided expert witness testimony for courts in Indiana.

Upon graduating from Purdue with his Ph.D., Dr. Huey worked as a therapist, Clinical Director, and Business Development Director in residential treatment. This changed the course of his career. Being adopted himself, Dr. Huey was always drawn to the large population of other adoptees in residential treatment. He ultimately became convinced that this population needed specialty care and in November of 2006, Dr. Huey founded Calo. Calo grew to a 200 plus employee organization with the same numbers teen clients served each year. He sold Calo and retired in June of 2015. Dr. Huey now presents at conferences around the country on issues of trauma, parenting, couples communication, and residential care. He served on the boards of the Attachment and Trauma Network (ATN), the National Association of Therapeutic Schools and Programs (NATSAP), and the Association for Treatment of Trauma in the Attachment of Children (ATTACH). He and his wife, Jo, live in Linn Creek, Missouri, and are the parents of 6 children and recently welcomed their first grandchild into the family.

About the training

Foster care and adoption is a very survivable trauma. It is frequently compounded by pre-placement trauma of neglect and other abuse. This trauma in the developmental attachment window damages the brain. Typically, treatment for this damage has been behavioral or cognitive-behavioral in focus. This is misguided. This presentation will touch on the latest in brain research and early childhood trauma to lay a groundwork for correct treatment of children with a trauma history. Neurofeedback, EMDR, Transferable Attachment, Sensory Integration, and relational focus will be addressed as treatment modalities that show efficacy with such trauma issues. The presenters own adoption history will inform the discussion.
